Dear Friend:

Your gift of love means so much. Children never cease to amaze me. It was warm the Sunday before Easter. I took the girls to Trader's World flea market. As we walked, all of a sudden the girls hear "peep, peep". One of them said, "Did you hear the peep, peep?" Oh, I knew what it was. "Where did you get the chicken?", one asked. "A lady is selling them over there." Oh, off they went toward the chickens. "Let me see." "Let me have one." The excitement was on its full roll. Some were white, yellow, black, brown on and on. "How much are the chicks?" "They are $1.00 each," the lady replied. Before I knew it I was carrying 10 chicks home.

We arrived home with the giggles and the peep, peep. I had to leave and told the girls to put the chicks in the laundry room until I could move them to the barn. I called later, and to my surprise this is what took place: "Ms. Condo, the different chicks didn't like each other." (kind of like the world). The children opened the drawers in the bathroom, and put paper towels, food and water down. When I asked the girls, they said, "Its kind of like their little apartments." Of course, I'm thinking how quickly can I get the chickens to the barn. We looked on the internet for how to take care of the baby chicks. They needed sunlight. So what do the girls do, they took doll strollers and took them for a walk. What a memory for children who feel no hope. They have 10 little reminders of how life can be a dream.

Remember the children in your estate planning.

As many of you know animals are a great part of One Way Farm Children's Home. Children respond to the unconditional love. There are things that children do that bring a tear to you and there are things animals do also.

The day the fence was finished, I drove down as the gate to the run was opened. The dogs slowly came out and then began to run around rolling on the grass. Then they did an unusual thing, they ran to the fence where I stood, tapped the fence and then began to roll. For the older and heavier golden retriever it was a little hard, but she was determined. Then they would get up and tap the fence again, they could have run off on the grounds, but didn't. I felt they were saying thanks. As the process repeated, I began to cry. I could feel almost like the movie , Born Free. These are tears of love between a human and an animal.

An emotion that reaches deep into your heart.

As I left they gathered at the corner of the fence as if to say, "Its okay now I can run".

A big "Thank You" to everyone who worked on the fence for the dogs.
